About this oral history...

Oral history has been described as 'a picture of the past in people's own words'. It is based on stories by people who were involved in life's events, told in their own, passionate words. It adds to the official written record and gives us a more intimate and personal perspective on how, when and why things happened. Oral history is a means of communicating how individuals perceived and dealt with challenge, achievement and failure. It often reveals the unsung heroes, those actually responsible for innovations and important changes, and provides them with an opportunity to evaluate their actions in a wider occupational, social and political context.

The RTA established its Oral History Program in 1997 to investigate various topics of historical interest. The Remembrance Driveway and VC Rest Areas is the 12th thematic oral history to be undertaken as part of the program. It is based on 38 hours of digitally recorded interviews with 19 individuals – current and former members of the Remembrance Driveway Committee, local historians, landscape designers and an eminent military historian. It discusses how the concept of a Remembrance Driveway developed out of a desire to create a living memorial of trees to those who had served in World War II, rather than construct more built monuments. The oral history also provides background information on each of the VC recipients featured in the Rest Areas along the Hume and Federal Highways between Sydney and Canberra.

The Remembrance Driveway commemorates all those who served in the Australian Defence Forces during World War II, subsequent conflicts and peace keeping missions, and those who currently serve in operational theatres around the world. It is a tribute from those who remember yesterday and who have faith in tomorrow.

Compiled excerpts from the original interviews may also be accessed on the RTA website. Go to www.rta.nsw.gov.au/oralhistory and follow the links to "The Remembrance Driveway and VC Rest Areas". Further information on Remembrance Driveway can be found in the brochure Remembrance Driveway – a living memorial, available at www.remembrancedriveway.org.au

The opinions expressed in the oral history interviews are those of the individuals concerned and do not necessarily represent in whole or in part the position of the NSW Roads and Traffic Authority.
