WIN FRONT ROW SEATS TO SEE SYDNEY SHINE THIS NEW YEAR’S EVE

The NSW Government is once again offering all NSW residents the opportunity to celebrate New Year’s Eve from one of Sydney’s most spectacular vantage points - the Cahill Expressway above Circular Quay.

Minister for Roads and Freight Duncan Gay today announced the online ballot opens today.

I encourage people to enter their household in the online draw to win one of 1600 family passes for five people to either the 9pm or midnight fireworks,” Minister Gay said.

“This incredibly popular event was first held in the year 2000 and each year since we have received thousands of entries into the ballot.

“The lucky winners not only get a front row seat to the world-famous fireworks, they will be able to enjoy the fun and family-friendly atmosphere created by a great range of pre-fireworks entertainment.”

Mr Gay said entries close at 11.59pm on Sunday 9 November and were restricted to one entry per household.

“Why not enter the ballot and have the chance to share a New Year’s to remember with your family and friends,” Mr Gay said.

The Cahill Expressway is a specially designated family area and entry is by ticket only.
