The Australian and NSW Governments are funding this work to ease congestion, reduce traffic delays and improve travel times on Sydney’s state roads.

Transport for NSW will start work later this year to add a fourth northbound lane on Devlin Street, Ryde between Victoria Road and Blaxland Road.

Currently, the number of northbound lanes on Devlin Street reduces to two lanes before the intersection with Victoria Road. The reduced lanes and the increased traffic from Victoria Road can result in vehicle queueing at Devlin Street, Blaxland Road and Parkes Street.

The additional northbound lane will ease congestion and improve traffic flow, travel times and road safety through the Devlin Street, Blaxland Road and Parkes Street intersection.

The improvements will also include retaining wall, street light and overhead signage upgrades along Devlin Street. During this work Transport will adjust the pedestrian fencing, drainage, utilities and medians. We will also resurface the road and repaint road markings.

The road improvements on Devlin Street is one of a suite of projects, which form part of the stimulus package announced by the Federal Government on 29 June 2020. This package aims to help support economic growth and jobs creation post COVID-19.

Benefits

The project will:

- improve traffic flow and travel times through the Devlin Street, Blaxland Road and Parkes Street intersection
- reduce congestion, queueing and delays for northbound traffic on Devlin Street, especially during peak periods
- enhance safety for pedestrians and road users.
